Most studios don't actually have a lead problem

Ask a studio owner what they need and the answer is nearly always the same. More people. More reach. More enquiries coming in.

But look at what happens after someone puts their hand up, and that is usually where the money is quietly going missing.

Someone fills in a form on a Tuesday night and hears back on Thursday. A woman rings during the 6pm class, nobody picks up, and nobody calls her back. A trial booking takes six steps, and half the people who start it never reach the end.

None of that is a failure of effort. You are teaching, covering shifts, managing instructors, and running a business. Nobody can walk out of a class to answer a DM within two minutes.

But it is worth being honest about what it costs. If ten people get in touch this week and three of them never really hear back, more advertising won't fix that. You would just be paying to lose people faster.

The bit most owners underestimate

Look at enough Pilates studios back to back and the same thing keeps turning up. The studios that grow steadily, rather than in random bursts whenever a referral walks in, are rarely doing anything clever with their marketing. They have simply tidied up everything that happens between someone getting interested and someone paying them every month.

That is what this workbook is for. It takes you through your own customer journey, one question at a time, and shows you where people are quietly dropping off.

You won't need to fix all 27 things. Most owners find five or six weak spots they had no idea existed, sort out two or three of them, and see the difference within a month or two. Small changes stack up. A faster reply here, one less step there, a referral offer that actually runs on its own. On their own, none of them look like much. Together, they usually decide whether your studio grows every month or only when you get lucky.

Be honest, not optimistic

This only works if you score what is actually happening, not what you have been meaning to set up. The questions you feel a bit uncomfortable answering are almost always the ones worth acting on.

HOW IT WORKS

Scoring your audit

Twenty seven questions across seven parts of your customer journey. Score each one, jot a quick note, then add it all up at the end.

2
Yes
This genuinely works. Not "technically in place", actually working.

1
Somewhat
It exists, but it is patchy, manual, or half finished.

0
No
This is not happening at your studio right now.

Under every question there is space for a note. Don't skip it. The notes end up being more useful than the score, because they tell you why something is not working, not just that it isn't.

THE SEVEN PLACES PEOPLE DROP OFF

A note on time

Give this 15 to 20 minutes and do it in one sitting if you can. It works better than dipping in and out, because the pattern only really shows up once you can see all seven parts side by side.

SECTION ONE

Website

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

For most people, your website is the first proper look they get at your studio. It either makes them feel confident or gives them a reason to keep browsing.

01

Is it immediately obvious what makes your studio different?

WHY IT MATTERS

Someone lands on your site and decides within about five seconds whether to keep reading. If they can't tell how you differ from the studio three streets away, the only thing left to compare is price.

COMMON MISTAKE

The homepage talks about Pilates rather than your studio. "Reformer Pilates classes in a beautiful space" is something a hundred other studios could write word for word.

QUICK FIX

Write one plain sentence near the top of the page saying who you help and what they get out of it. No cleverness needed.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

02

Can a visitor book a trial in two clicks?

WHY IT MATTERS

Interest fades fast. Every extra page between wanting to book and actually booking is another chance for someone to get distracted and close the tab.

COMMON MISTAKE

The booking button drops people on a general contact page, or worse, just shows an email address.

QUICK FIX

Put "Book a Trial" in the main menu and send it straight to a booking form or calendar. No detours.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

03

Is your pricing easy to understand?

WHY IT MATTERS

When pricing is hidden or confusing, people don't message to ask. They tell themselves they will think about it, and then they don't.

COMMON MISTAKE

Prices are "available on request", or the page lists so many packages that nobody can work out where to start.

QUICK FIX

Show a starting price or a clear trial offer, even if full memberships get discussed properly on a call.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

04

Does your website actually work on a phone?

WHY IT MATTERS

Almost everyone finds you on their phone, usually through Instagram or Google. If the site loads slowly or the booking button is hard to tap, you lose them right there.

COMMON MISTAKE

The site was built on a big screen and never properly tested on a small one, so text overlaps and forms are a pain to fill in.

QUICK FIX

Open your own site on your phone right now and try to book a trial. Write down everything that annoys you.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

SECTION TWO

Lead Capture

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

Not everyone who likes the look of your studio is ready to commit today. If you only ever capture the people who are, you are ignoring the bigger group.

05

Do you capture people who aren't ready to book yet?

WHY IT MATTERS

Hardly anyone joins a studio the first time they hear about it. If there is no way to stay in touch with someone who is curious but hesitant, they are gone the moment they close the tab.

COMMON MISTAKE

The only two options on the website are "book now" or leave. There is nothing for the person still making up their mind.

QUICK FIX

Give them something smaller to say yes to. A beginner's guide, a class pass, a waitlist for the next intro offer.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

06

Is there a real reason to hand over their details?

WHY IT MATTERS

Nobody gives out their phone number to be polite. There has to be something in it for them, and it has to be obvious.

COMMON MISTAKE

A "Sign up for our newsletter" box sitting at the bottom of the page with no explanation of why anyone would want that.

QUICK FIX

Swap it for something specific and useful. A free trial class, a first-timer's guide, or money off the first month.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

07

Are enquiries collected from every channel, not just the website?

WHY IT MATTERS

People message studios through Instagram, WhatsApp, phone calls and the front desk. When those enquiries live in five different apps, some of them will always get forgotten.

COMMON MISTAKE

DMs get replied to on the fly and nothing gets written down, so there is no record of who is still waiting on an answer.

QUICK FIX

Start a single list. Even a spreadsheet is fine. Name, where they came from, date, and whether they have had a reply.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

08

Do you know how many enquiries never get a reply at all?

WHY IT MATTERS

Nobody sets out to ignore a potential member. It happens quietly, in the middle of a busy week, and unless you check, you will never know how many you lost that way.

COMMON MISTAKE

Enquiries get handled as they come in, with no way of checking afterwards that every single one was actually answered.

QUICK FIX

Every Friday, go through the week's enquiries and confirm each one got a response. It takes five minutes and it is usually a bit of a shock the first time.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

SECTION THREE

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

Booking Experience

Getting someone to say "yes, I'm interested" is the hard part. What happens in the next few minutes decides whether that turns into a trial or just fizzles out.

09

How easy is it to actually book a trial?

WHY IT MATTERS

The simpler the process, the more people finish it. That is about as close to a rule as marketing gets.

COMMON MISTAKE

Booking means downloading an app, creating an account and confirming an email before anyone can even see what times are available.

QUICK FIX

Let a new person book with a name, a phone number and a preferred time. The account setup can wait until they have been in.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

10

Are there steps in there that don't need to be?

WHY IT MATTERS

Every extra field and every extra page gives someone a moment to pause, get distracted, or decide to do it later. Later usually means never.

COMMON MISTAKE

Health history, emergency contacts and a waiver, all before someone has even picked a class time.

QUICK FIX

Write out your booking process step by step, then ask which of those steps could just as easily happen after the booking is confirmed.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

11

Does a confirmation land instantly?

WHY IT MATTERS

People want to know straight away that it worked. Silence after booking makes them wonder if it went through, and that doubt turns into no-shows.

COMMON MISTAKE

The confirmation only goes out when someone at the studio gets a spare minute to check the system, sometimes hours later.

QUICK FIX

Set up an automatic text or email that fires the second a booking comes through. Even a simple one does the job.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

12

Do you remind people before their trial?

WHY IT MATTERS

People book with good intentions and then life happens. A no-show is not just an empty spot in the class, it is usually a member you never get.

COMMON MISTAKE

No reminder at all, or one that goes out on the morning of the class when plans have already changed.

QUICK FIX

Send a short reminder the day before, then another a couple of hours before the class starts.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

SECTION FOUR

Lead Follow-Up

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

This is where most studios lose the most people, and where most owners are surprised by their own score. Take your time with these four.

13

Does every enquiry get an answer straight away?

WHY IT MATTERS

When someone messages you at 8pm, they are usually messaging two or three studios in the same ten minutes. Whoever answers first often wins, whether or not they are the better studio.

COMMON MISTAKE

Messages get answered "when there's a minute", which in a real week can mean tomorrow.

QUICK FIX

Aim to respond in minutes, not hours. Even a short holding message buys you time and keeps the person warm.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

14

Do you chase people who go quiet?

WHY IT MATTERS

Plenty of people who never reply to your first message still want to join. They got busy, they meant to come back to it, and they forgot. One more nudge often brings them back.

COMMON MISTAKE

One message goes out, there is no reply, and that person quietly disappears from the process.

QUICK FIX

Plan two or three follow-ups over the following week for anyone who has gone silent. Friendly, short, no pressure.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

15

Do missed calls get called back?

WHY IT MATTERS

A missed call is a person who wanted to talk to you right then. If nobody rings back, or somebody rings back two days later, that moment has passed.

COMMON MISTAKE

Calls come in during class, nobody can answer, and the call log gets glanced at whenever someone remembers.

QUICK FIX

Make it somebody's job, or set up something automated, so every missed call gets a text or a callback the same day.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

16

What happens to enquiries that come in outside opening hours?

WHY IT MATTERS

People browse studios in the evening, on the sofa, after the kids are down. That is exactly when nobody at the studio is watching the inbox.

COMMON MISTAKE

A Saturday night enquiry sits untouched until Monday morning, by which point they have booked somewhere else.

QUICK FIX

Have something reply out of hours, even if it is just an acknowledgement with a link to the class timetable.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

SECTION FIVE

Instagram & Social Proof

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

Almost everyone checks your Instagram before they message you. What they find there either settles their nerves or gives them one more reason to hesitate.

17

Does your content make people trust you?

WHY IT MATTERS

They are deciding whether to trust you with their body, their time and their money, and they are deciding before they ever speak to you. Your content is doing that job whether you meant it to or not.

COMMON MISTAKE

The feed is mostly generic Pilates tips that could belong to any studio in any city.

QUICK FIX

Put more of your actual studio in it. Your instructors, your space, your members, the things that only happen at your place.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

18

Do you share member stories regularly?

WHY IT MATTERS

People believe other people far more than they believe a business. A woman hearing that someone just like her came back from a back injury will do more than any caption you write.

COMMON MISTAKE

You have plenty of happy members and almost none of their stories are anywhere public.

QUICK FIX

Ask one member a month for a couple of sentences or a quick video, and post it. That is twelve stories a year.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

19

Are your reviews easy to find?

WHY IT MATTERS

People go looking for reviews before they decide, especially on Google. If there is not much to find, or what is there is three years old, they hesitate.

COMMON MISTAKE

Good reviews exist, but they are scattered across platforms and none of them are anywhere near the booking page.

QUICK FIX

Keep your Google reviews fresh by asking a few members each month, and put your best ones on the website where people decide.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

20

Is the next step obvious to someone who likes your page?

WHY IT MATTERS

Someone can love your content and still not know what to do about it. If the route from "I like this" to "I've booked" isn't spelled out, most people won't work it out themselves.

COMMON MISTAKE

The link in the bio goes to the homepage, and the person has to go hunting from there.

QUICK FIX

Point the bio link straight at your trial booking page, and mention it in your captions now and then. People need telling.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

SECTION FIVE SCORE

_____ / 8

SECTION SIX

Retention

4 QUESTIONS
8 POINTS

Growth isn't only about new faces. A member who quits after two months undoes all the work it took to get them through the door in the first place.

21

Do you have a proper referral offer?

WHY IT MATTERS

Your happiest members are your best salespeople, but most of them will never think to bring a friend unless you ask and make it worth doing.

COMMON MISTAKE

Referrals happen occasionally, by accident, with nothing behind them.

QUICK FIX

Set up something simple and repeatable. A free class for the member, a discounted first month for the friend, mentioned out loud in the studio.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

22

Do you notice when a member goes quiet?

WHY IT MATTERS

People rarely cancel out of nowhere. They stop coming first, feel a bit guilty about it, and then cancel. That in-between period is your chance to get them back.

COMMON MISTAKE

Nobody realises a member has vanished until the cancellation email lands.

QUICK FIX

Set a rule. Anyone who hasn't booked in two weeks gets a friendly message asking how they're getting on. Not a sales pitch, just a check-in.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

23

Do members hear from you when they hit a milestone?

WHY IT MATTERS

People stay where they feel noticed and where they can feel themselves getting better. A member who feels invisible is an easy member to lose.

COMMON MISTAKE

Someone hits their fiftieth class or their first year with you and nobody says a word.

QUICK FIX

Track a couple of simple milestones and send a short, warm message when someone reaches one. It costs nothing and people remember it.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

24

Do you ask for feedback before people are ready to leave?

WHY IT MATTERS

Small irritations build up quietly. A class time that stopped working, an instructor who isn't the right fit. Most people won't mention any of it. They will just leave.

COMMON MISTAKE

Feedback only ever comes up in passing, so the small stuff never reaches you until it has turned into a cancellation.

QUICK FIX

Every few months, send one short message asking how things are going and what would make it better. Two questions is enough.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

SECTION SIX SCORE

_____ / 8

SECTION SEVEN

Numbers

3 QUESTIONS
6 POINTS

The shortest section, and usually the one that changes the most. You cannot fix a problem you cannot see, and these three numbers show you almost everything.

25

Do you know your trial to member conversion rate?

WHY IT MATTERS

This one number tells you more about your studio than almost anything else. Without it you are guessing whether your trial experience is any good.

COMMON MISTAKE

Trials happen, some people join, and nobody has ever worked out the ratio between the two.

QUICK FIX

Track two numbers a month. Trials attended, and new members joined. Divide one by the other. That's it.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

26

Do you know where your best members come from?

WHY IT MATTERS

Not all new members are worth the same. Some channels bring people who stay for years. Others bring people who cancel in six weeks. If you don't know which is which, you can't lean into the good one.

COMMON MISTAKE

Marketing decisions get made on gut feel rather than on which channel actually produces members who stick around.

QUICK FIX

Ask every new member how they heard about you, write it down, and look back at it every few months.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

NOTES

27

Do you know how many enquiries never book anything?

WHY IT MATTERS

This is the number owners are most often wrong about. It sits between "people are interested" and "people joined", and it is usually a lot bigger than anyone expects.

COMMON MISTAKE

Nobody counts the people who asked a question and then quietly disappeared, so the problem stays invisible.

QUICK FIX

Each month, count total enquiries and total trials booked from them. The difference between the two is your real opportunity.

| Yes (2) | Somewhat (1) | No (0)

What your score means

0-15

Critical

There is very little holding your customer journey together at the moment, which sounds harsh but is actually good news. Most studios in this range have been focused on teaching brilliant classes rather than building anything behind them. Fix even three or four of these and you will probably notice the difference within a month.

16-30

Needs Attention

Bits of it are working, but you are losing people every month in ways you can see now. Start with whichever section scored lowest. That is almost always where the biggest win is hiding, and it is usually follow-up.

31–45

Growing

The foundations are decent. What is left tends to be smaller and more specific, and because everything else is already working, sorting those bits out compounds nicely rather than just plugging a hole.

46–53

Strong

You are ahead of most studios. At this point growth comes from sharpening the details rather than fixing anything broken, and from making sure none of it quietly falls apart as you get busier.

54

Excellent

Rare. If you scored full marks and you were honest about it, your customer journey is tighter than almost every studio out there. Your job now is protecting that as the studio grows.

NEXT STEPS

Pick three things. Not twenty seven.

Go back through your notes and find the questions where you scored a 0 or a 1 and the note underneath genuinely bothered you a bit. Those are your three. Everything else can wait.

3 Third fix

Why three and not everything

Studios that try to fix all of it at once usually fix none of it. Three changes, done properly, beat twenty seven changes done half-heartedly. Come back to this workbook in ninety days, score it again, and pick the next three.

If a few of these stung a bit, let's talk

If working through this brought up two or three things you would like to sort out, I am happy to go through your results with you.

I'll take a proper look at your website, your booking journey, your Meta Ads if you are running any, and what happens after someone gets in touch. Then I'll tell you where you are most likely losing people, and what I would do about it.

No pitch, no pressure. Just practical stuff you can go and use, whether we ever work together or not.
